MUNICH, GERMANY

Pinakotheken & Lenbachhaus (Munich): Masterpieces

Thirty works across Munich collections, with comparisons that make large changes in painting easier to see.

Dürer's frontal self-portrait and Rembrandt's shadowed young face offer two very different degrees of access to a painter. One presents itself with extraordinary clarity; the other allows the features to become difficult to read. Neither approach is simply more realistic. Each decides what a likeness needs to show.

That question widens across this selection. Light can establish a landscape, outlines can give a child weight, and colour can cease to describe what would be seen under ordinary conditions. The later works do not provide an inevitable destination for the earlier ones. They make different choices visible. These paintings and works on paper belong to several Munich collections, so the sequence is for comparison rather than a single walking route.

Artline selected these works from documented museum holdings. The selection is independent of the museum, and individual works may be on loan or off display. Dates and attributions retain the qualifications in the linked records.

Explore this selection in Artline

See the selected works alongside books and events from their period, or compare when the artists lived. The books and events provide context, not evidence of direct influence. Works without confirmed dates remain in this guide.

Artworks in context Who lived when?

artlines.org/guides/munich-museums

The selection · 30

1. Self-Portrait in a Fur-Trimmed Robe
   Albrecht Dürer · 1500
2. The Crucifixion
   Giotto di Bondone · 1320–1325
3. Saints Cosmas and Damian Saved
   Fra Angelico · 1438–1440
4. Virgin of the Annunciation
   Antonello da Messina · 1473
5. Madonna of the Curtain
   Raphael · 1512
6. The Crowning with Thorns
   Titian · 1570–1575
7. The Great Last Judgement
   Peter Paul Rubens · c. 1617
8. The Hippopotamus and Crocodile Hunt
   Peter Paul Rubens · 1615–1616
9. The Risen Christ
   Rembrandt van Rijn · 1661
10. Self-Portrait as a Young Man
    Rembrandt van Rijn · 1629
11. Sunflowers
    Vincent van Gogh · 1888
12. Monet in His Studio Boat
    Édouard Manet · 1874
13. The Poor Poet
    Carl Spitzweg · 1839 (museum record)
14. The Gazebo
    Caspar David Friedrich · 1818
15. Christ and the Samaritan Woman at the Well
    Angelica Kauffman · 1796
16. A Beer Garden in Munich
    Max Liebermann · 1884
17. Children with a Goldfish Bowl
    Paula Modersohn-Becker · 1906–1907
18. A Street in Upper Norwood
    Camille Pissarro · 1871
19. The Road to Hampton Court
    Alfred Sisley · 1874
20. Dance Around the Golden Calf
    Emil Nolde · 1910
21. Blue Horse I
    Franz Marc · 1911
22. Colour Study: Squares with Concentric Circles
    Wassily Kandinsky · 1913
23. Into the Night
    Marianne von Werefkin · 1910
24. Jawlensky and Werefkin
    Gabriele Münter · 1908–1909
25. Kandinsky and Erma Bossi at the Table in the Murnau House
    Gabriele Münter · 1912
26. Portrait of the Dancer Alexander Sakharoff
    Alexej von Jawlensky · 1909
27. Promenade
    August Macke · 1913
28. Murnau View with Railway and Castle
    Wassily Kandinsky · 1909
29. Self-Portrait with a Skeleton
    Lovis Corinth · 1896
30. Improvisation: Gorge
    Wassily Kandinsky · 1914

01 / 30

Self-Portrait in a Fur-Trimmed Robe

Albrecht Dürer

1500 · Paint on limewood; binder not specified in source · Alte Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

© Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen – Alte Pinakothek München. Albrecht Dürer, Selbstbildnis im Pelzrock, 1500. https://www.sammlung.pinakothek.de/de/artwork/Qlx2QpQ4Xq CC BY-SA 4.0; compressed study reproduction. · CC BY-SA 4.0

The symmetrical, frontal arrangement recalls images of Christ, a connection the museum makes explicit. Dürer nevertheless preserves the particularity of his own features. The hand touching fur also displays a painter's capacity to distinguish surfaces. Seeing, making and the public dignity of the artist come together in a pose far removed from a casual record of appearance.

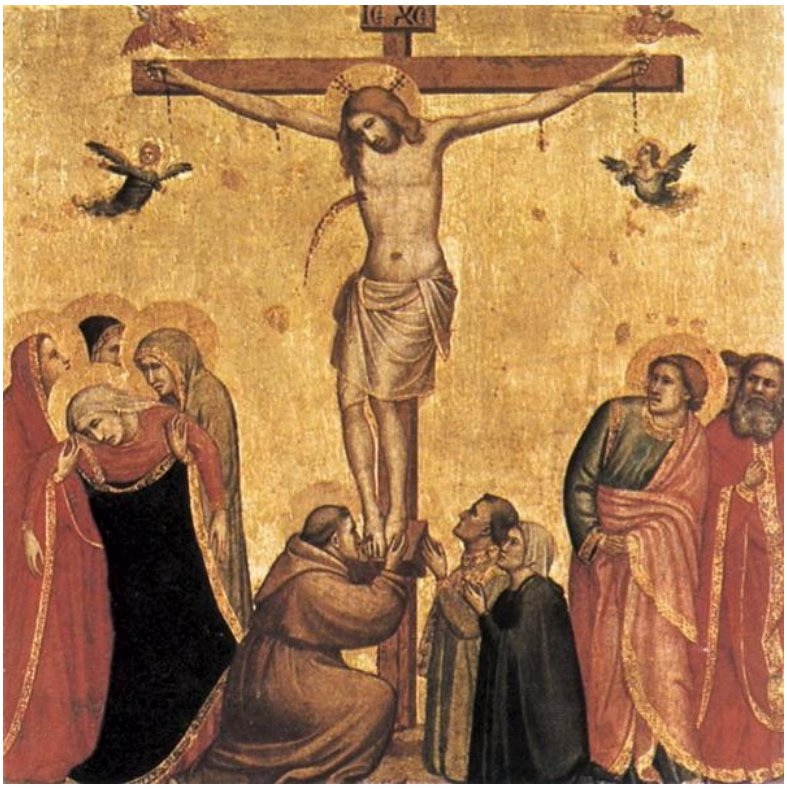

Object source · Open artwork · Inventory: 537

02 / 30

The Crucifixion

Giotto di Bondone

1320–1325 · Alte Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

Giotto di Bondone. The Crucifixion. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

The gold setting does not prevent the mourners from having bodily weight. At the foot of the cross they bend, turn and support one another, giving grief several recognisable actions. Giotto connects the figures through those responses rather than making every face repeat one expression. The sacred space remains distinct from ordinary landscape while the gestures remain accessible.

Object source · Open artwork

03 / 30

Saints Cosmas and Damian Saved

Fra Angelico

1438–1440 · Tempera on panel · Alte Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

Fra Angelico. Saint Cosmas and Saint Damian Salvaged. WikiArt source label: Public domain. Proportional resize and JPEG compression; no crop. Source: https://www.wikiart.org/en/fra-angelico/saint-cosmas-and-saint-damian-salvaged-1440 · Public domain (WikiArt source label)

The landscape contains more than one moment. Paths, buildings and changes of level separate small groups, allowing the saints' narrative to unfold across a continuous panel. Fra Angelico makes sequence a spatial matter: moving the eye can mean moving forward through events. Each episode retains enough definition to be followed without occupying a separate frame.

Object source · Open artwork

04 / 30

Virgin of the Annunciation

Antonello da Messina

1473 · Alte Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

Antonello da Messina. Virgin of the Annunciation. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

The open book establishes an activity that has been interrupted. Lifted attention and crossed hands provide the response, with little surrounding narrative to explain it. Antonello concentrates the event around face, mantle and gesture. The reduction gives a small alteration in posture the significance that a more crowded Annunciation might distribute among angel, architecture and landscape.

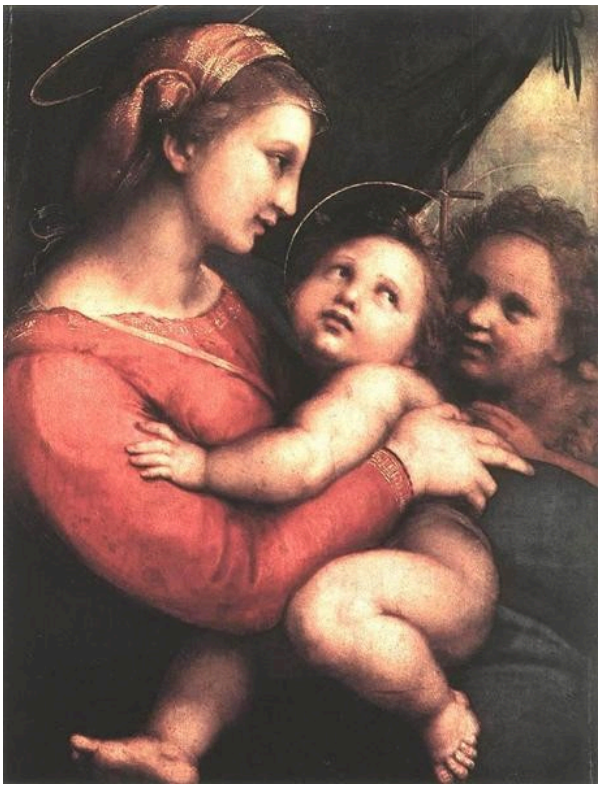

Object source · Open artwork

05 / 30

Madonna of the Curtain

Raphael

1512 · Oil on wood panel · Alte Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

Madonna della Tenda. WikiArt; Raphael. Proportional resizing and JPEG compression; source frame preserved. · Public domain

The overlapping figures remain distinct because their hands and glances can be followed from one body to another. Raphael's close grouping joins clarity with physical familiarity. The curtain encloses the exchange without interrupting it. An orderly composition is therefore only the starting point: tracing who touches whom reveals a more particular network of attention within the group.

Object source · Open artwork

06 / 30

The Crowning with Thorns

Titian

1570–1575 · Alte Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

Titian. Crowning with Thorns. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

Crossing poles and arms press around the seated Christ. Broken boundaries between flesh, cloth and shadow add instability to those competing directions. Titian's handling does not merely fill in a violent arrangement; it participates in its disturbance. Compare the difficulty of settling on an edge here with the readily distinguished bodies in Raphael's nearby selection entry.

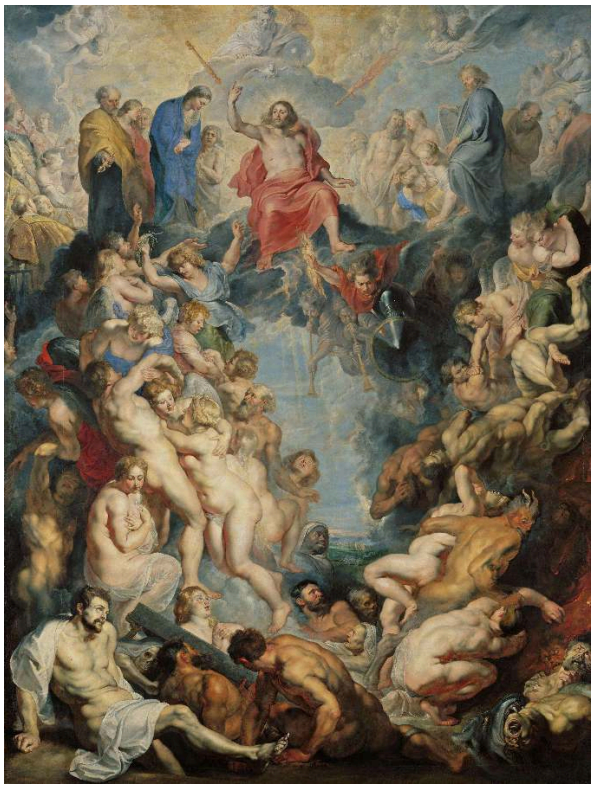

Object source · Open artwork

07 / 30

The Great Last Judgement

Peter Paul Rubens

c. 1617 · Paint on canvas; binder not specified in source · Alte Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

© Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen – Alte Pinakothek München. Peter Paul Rubens, Das Große Jüngste Gericht, um 1617. https://www.sammlung.pinakothek.de/de/artwork/Dj4mkQbL5A CC BY-SA 4.0; compressed study reproduction. · CC BY-SA 4.0

The crowd becomes intelligible through large movements of rising and falling bodies. Light separates passages that would be difficult to read as individual figures from a distance. Rubens organises the altarpiece at more than one scale: broad directions first, particular limbs and faces later. A small reproduction can explain this design but cannot reproduce the physical encounter with its size.

Object source · Open artwork · Inventory: 890

08 / 30

The Hippopotamus and Crocodile Hunt

Peter Paul Rubens

1615–1616 · Alte Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

Peter Paul Rubens. Hippopotamus and Crocodile Hunt. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

Horses, hunters and animals press into a shared centre with little space to retreat. Weapons and limbs pull against one another, while contrasting hides, flesh and clothes keep parts of the struggle identifiable. The hunt is constructed as a spectacle of collision. Its compressed arrangement tells more about Rubens's pictorial decisions than about how the animals behave outside a painting.

Object source · Open artwork

09 / 30

The Risen Christ

Rembrandt van Rijn

1661 · Alte Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

Rembrandt van Rijn. Christ Resurrected. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

The lit torso and nearby hand give the half-length figure the proximity of a portrait. The museum identifies Christ after the Resurrection, presented without the visible wounds of the Passion. Little surrounding action explains the event. Instead, the frontal encounter lets a religious image address the viewer through the same close attention that a portrait can establish.

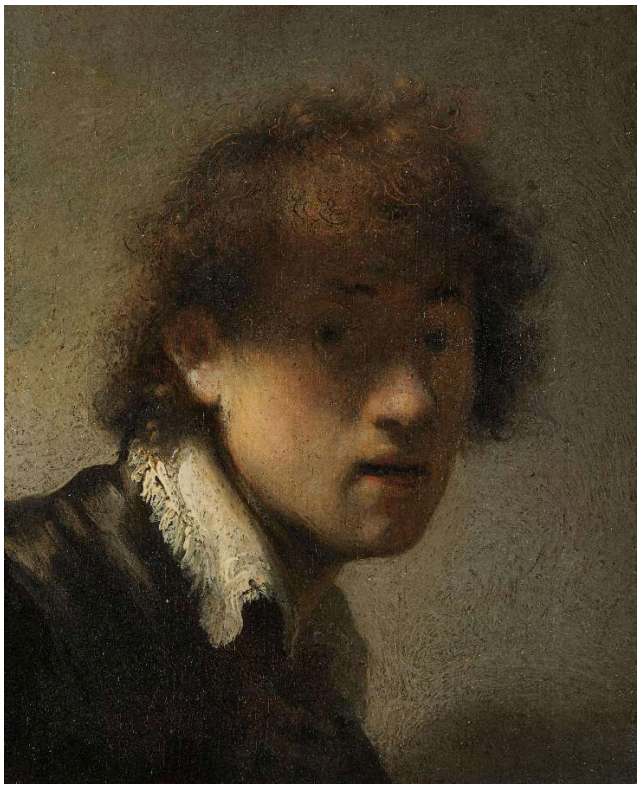

Object source · Open artwork

10 / 30

Self-Portrait as a Young Man

Rembrandt van Rijn

1629 · Paint on oak; binder not specified in source · Alte Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

© Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen – Alte Pinakothek München. Rembrandt (Harmensz. van Rijn), Jugendliches Selbstbildnis, 1629. https://www.sammlung.pinakothek.de/de/artwork/y7GE1PmGPV CC BY-SA 4.0; compressed study reproduction. · CC BY-SA 4.0

Rembrandt gives the viewer less of his face than the light might initially promise. Hair casts shadow over the features while a collar and curls catch brighter accents. Likeness has to survive that uneven access. Beside Dürer's explicit frontal presentation, the painting makes concealment an active part of self-portraiture rather than merely a lack of illumination.

Object source · Open artwork · Inventory: 11427

11 / 30

Sunflowers

Vincent van Gogh

1888 · Oil on canvas · Neue Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

© Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen – Neue Pinakothek München. Vincent van Gogh, Sonnenblumen, 1888. https://www.sammlung.pinakothek.de/de/artwork/Y0GR9B7LRX CC BY-SA 4.0; compressed study reproduction. · CC BY-SA 4.0

Yellow repeats without producing identical flowers. Open blooms, curling petals and heavy seed heads supply different shapes within the restricted range. The blue-green background belongs to this Munich version and helps distinguish it from others in the series. Each head changes the balance of the group through its stage, direction and density, not simply through a different colour.

Object source · Open artwork · Inventory: 8672

12 / 30

Monet in His Studio Boat

Édouard Manet

1874 · Oil on canvas · Neue Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

Édouard Manet. Monet in his Studio Boat. WikiArt source label: Public domain. Proportional resize and JPEG compression; no crop. Source: https://www.wikiart.org/en/edouard-manet/monet-in-his-floating-studio-1874 · Public domain (WikiArt source label)

The boat places the painter inside the conditions he is painting. Its dark shelter frames pale clothes and an easel while broken marks describe the surrounding water. Manet's portrait makes an outdoor working arrangement visible. The finished landscape is no longer the only subject; the means of observing and producing it have acquired their own place in the image.

Object source · Open artwork

13 / 30

The Poor Poet

Carl Spitzweg

1839 (museum record) · Neue Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

Carl Spitzweg. The Poor Poet. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

An umbrella has become indoor equipment. Its shelter above the attic bed gives the room's literary activity an inconveniently practical context, reinforced by books, papers and the low ceiling. Spitzweg's comedy depends on those material conditions rather than on a grand claim about genius. The Munich version is dated 1839 in its collection record.

Object source · Open artwork

14 / 30

The Gazebo

Caspar David Friedrich

1818 · Oil on canvas · Neue Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

The Gazebo. WikiArt; Caspar David Friedrich. Proportional resizing and JPEG compression; source frame preserved. · Public domain

The distant spire reaches the viewer through a sheltered opening of plants and supports. Friedrich includes the place from which the view is seen, with two figures pausing inside it. The enclosure gives distance a frame and a bodily starting point. Landscape becomes an act of looking from somewhere particular rather than an unrestricted prospect.

Object source · Open artwork

15 / 30

Christ and the Samaritan Woman at the Well

Angelica Kauffman

1796 · Neue Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

Angelica Kauffman. Christ and the Samaritan woman at the well. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

The two figures' hands divide the exchange into gestures that can be followed across the well. Red and blue keep the bodies clearly separate against a restrained landscape. Kauffman gives conversation the structure of an event without surrounding it with a crowd. Direction, distance and response provide enough action for the biblical encounter.

Object source · Open artwork

16 / 30

A Beer Garden in Munich

Max Liebermann

1884 · Neue Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

Max Liebermann. Beer Garden in Munich. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

Tree trunks repeatedly interrupt the view of tables and visitors. Moving between them reveals partial encounters rather than one dominant incident. Sunlight supplies further breaks across clothing and ground. Liebermann lets a public gathering remain dispersed: the picture's breadth comes from many simultaneous occupations, not from assembling every face around a central protagonist.

Object source · Open artwork

17 / 30

Children with a Goldfish Bowl

Paula Modersohn-Becker

1906–1907 · Oil and tempera on canvas · Neue Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

Paula Modersohn-Becker. Children with goldfish bowl. WikiArt source label: Public domain. Proportional resize and JPEG compression; no crop. Source: https://www.wikiart.org/en/paula-modersohn-becker/children-with-goldfish-bowl-1907 · Public domain (WikiArt source label)

The held bowl keeps attention close to the child's body, which is defined through broad shapes and firm boundaries. Leaves and objects crowd the narrow field without dissolving that weight. Modersohn-Becker's simplified modelling differs from Liebermann's interrupted light. The comparison shows two means of establishing a figure: an accumulating silhouette and a shifting set of illuminated parts.

Object source · Open artwork

18 / 30

A Street in Upper Norwood

Camille Pissarro

1871 · Oil on canvas · Neue Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

© Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen – Neue Pinakothek München. Camille Pissarro, Straße in Upper Norwood, 1871. https://www.sammlung.pinakothek.de/de/artwork/PdxzrBExw5 CC BY-SA 4.0; compressed study reproduction. · CC BY-SA 4.0

The road and rooflines supply a direction beneath the broad grey sky. Small walkers fit into that recession, while bare branches interrupt it. Pissarro asks an ordinary suburban street to carry the work of a landscape. Its recognisable structure gives depth without a dramatic landmark, allowing houses and everyday movement to remain sufficient subjects.

Object source · Open artwork · Inventory: 8699

19 / 30

The Road to Hampton Court

Alfred Sisley

1874 · Neue Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

Alfred Sisley. The Road to Hampton Court. Image credit: Alfred Sisley. Wikimedia Commons. Public domain (https://creativecommons.org/publicdomain/mark/1.0/). Resized and JPEG-compressed; selected source frame preserved. · Public domain

The warm path draws the view into the distance beside cooler water. Trees and figures repeat at changing sizes, making that recession measurable. Unlike the enclosed Norwood street, the river leaves one side open. Sisley uses the same basic device, a route leading away, to produce a more expansive relation between the near ground and the sky.

Object source · Open artwork · Inventory: 13134

20 / 30

Dance Around the Golden Calf

Emil Nolde

1910 · Neue Pinakothek — Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen

Emil Nolde. Dance Around the Golden Calf. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

Stretched limbs alternately merge with colour and reappear at emphatic boundaries. The dance's agitation therefore continues beyond the bodies into the painted surface. Nolde's yellow, red and blue need not imitate ordinary illumination to organise the scene. Their abrupt contacts make movement available even where a particular pose becomes difficult to separate from its setting.

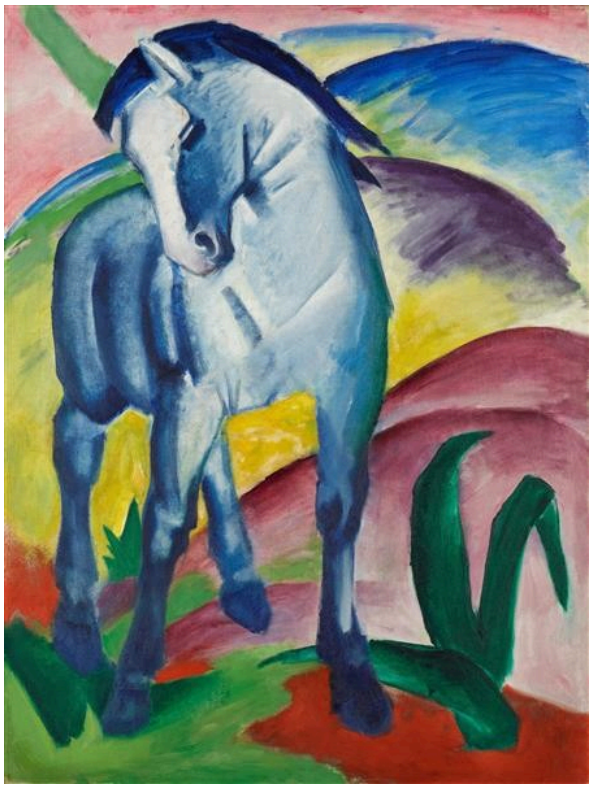

Object source · Open artwork

21 / 30

Blue Horse I

Franz Marc

1911 · Städtische Galerie im Lenbachhaus und Kunstbau München

Franz Marc. Blue Horse I. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

The lowered head remains recognisably equine despite the horse's blue. Rounded hills repeat the curve of its neck, joining animal and landscape through shape rather than naturalistic colour. Marc allows familiarity and alteration to coexist. The body supplies enough identification for colour to take on a different compositional role without making the subject disappear.

Object source · Open artwork

22 / 30

Colour Study: Squares with Concentric Circles

Wassily Kandinsky

1913 · Städtische Galerie im Lenbachhaus und Kunstbau München

Wassily Kandinsky. Color Study: Squares with Concentric Circles. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

Each square changes the neighbours around its rings. Width, order and proportion vary, so a colour's apparent force can be compared under different conditions. Kandinsky gives the study no hidden figurative subject to solve. Its work happens in the comparisons themselves, through repeated forms that remain deliberately irregular enough to avoid becoming a mechanical chart.

Object source · Open artwork

23 / 30

Into the Night

Marianne von Werefkin

1910 · Städtische Galerie im Lenbachhaus und Kunstbau München

Marianne von Werefkin. Into the night. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

Close façades narrow the walkers' passage, leaving little sky above. Blue, red and violet intensify the separation of buildings and clothes within that enclosure. Werefkin makes pressure a visible property of the street's proportions. The figures' private thoughts remain unknown; the surrounding architecture already explains why the space can feel difficult to move through.

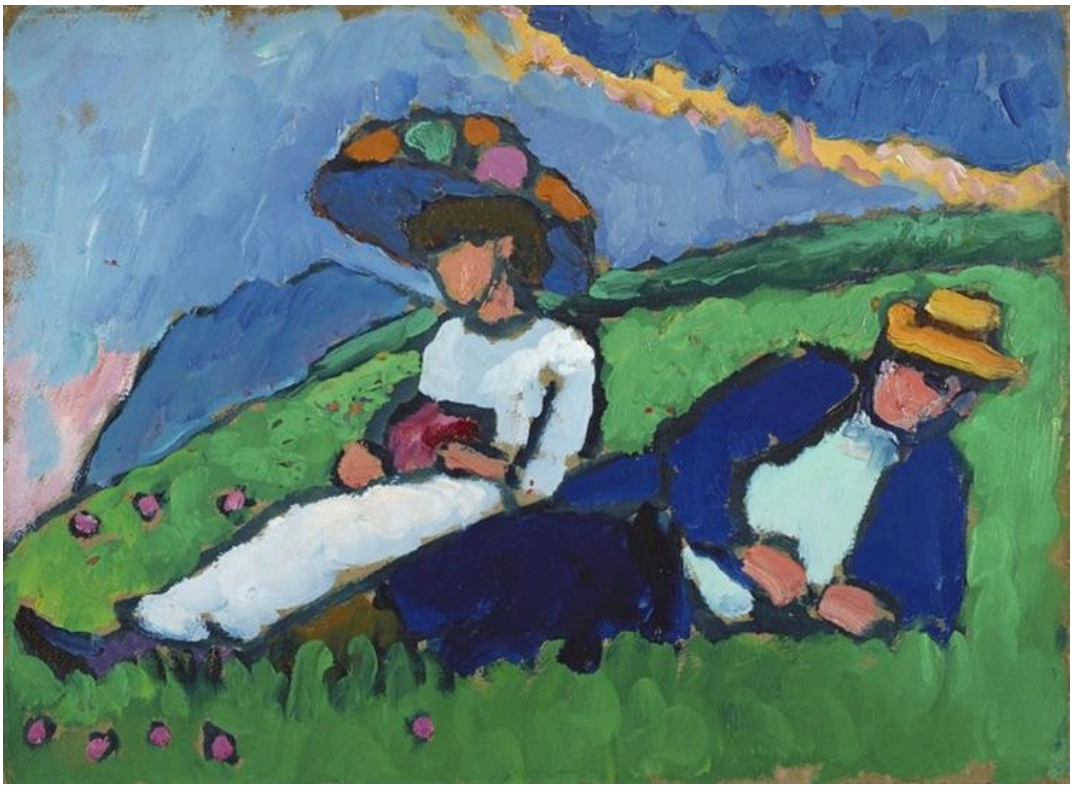

Object source · Open artwork

24 / 30

Jawlensky and Werefkin

Gabriele Münter

1908–1909 · Städtische Galerie im Lenbachhaus und Kunstbau München

Gabriele Münter. Jawlensky and Werefkin. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

The green slope tilts the resting artists toward the picture's surface. Their clothes form distinct patches beneath the broad blue sky, allowing portrait likeness and landscape design to coexist. Münter gives the sitters individual poses without withdrawing them from the larger colour arrangement. The ground is as consequential to the portrait as either figure's position upon it.

Object source · Open artwork

25 / 30

Kandinsky and Erma Bossi at the Table in the Murnau House

Gabriele Münter

1912 · Städtische Galerie im Lenbachhaus und Kunstbau München

Gabriele Münter. Kandinsky and Erma Bossi at the Table in the Murnau House. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

A pale tablecloth and faces emerge against the dark wall, with chairs and small objects establishing a particular room. Münter gives an artistic association the setting of ordinary domestic company. The large colour blocks keep the encounter compact. No ceremonial pose is needed for the gathering to become a record of people sharing a working circle's everyday world.

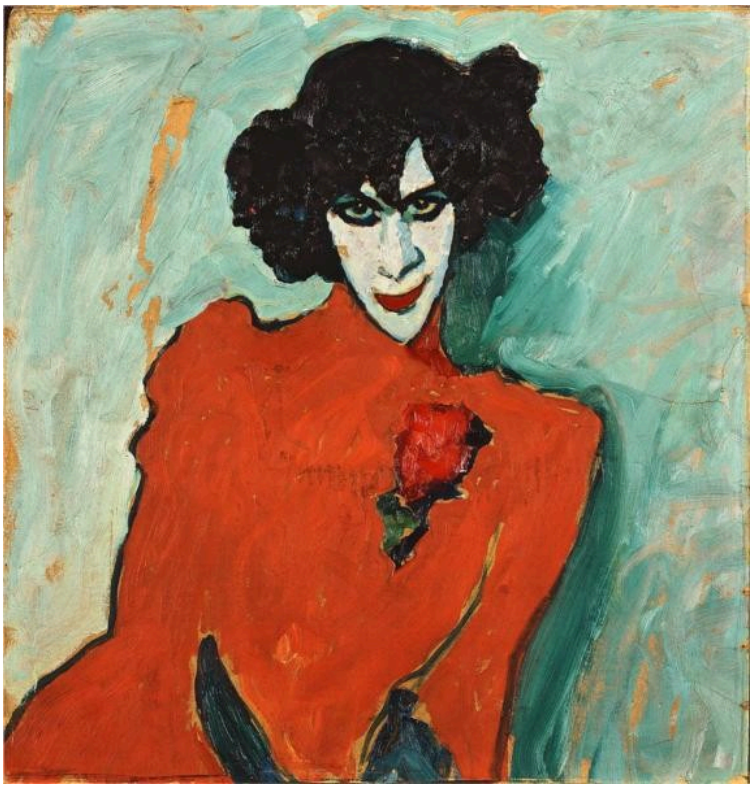

Object source · Open artwork

26 / 30

Portrait of the Dancer Alexander Sakharoff

Alexej von Jawlensky

1909 · Städtische Galerie im Lenbachhaus und Kunstbau München

Alexej von Jawlensky. Portrait of the Dancer Alexander Sakharoff. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

The red costume gathers the body into one forceful area beneath a pale, made-up face. Its turn differs from the outward gaze, preventing the portrait from becoming entirely frontal. Jawlensky makes stage appearance inseparable from the sitter's identity. Hair, eyes and mouth acquire their intensity through the surrounding colour rather than through an extensively described performance setting.

Object source · Open artwork

27 / 30

Promenade

August Macke

1913 · Städtische Galerie im Lenbachhaus und Kunstbau München

August Macke. Promenade. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

Upright bodies continue a pattern begun by tree trunks. Clothing and changes of direction keep the walkers identifiable within broad interlocking foliage. Macke connects public leisure to a close arrangement of forms, making people and vegetation routes through the same surface. Following the scene's activity and following its design need not be two separate operations.

Object source · Open artwork

28 / 30

Murnau View with Railway and Castle

Wassily Kandinsky

1909 · Oil on cardboard · Städtische Galerie im Lenbachhaus und Kunstbau München

Wassily Kandinsky. Murnau view with railway and castle. WikiArt source label: Public domain. Proportional resize and JPEG compression; no crop. Source: https://www.wikiart.org/en/wassily-kandinsky/murnau-view-with-railway-and-castle-1909 · Public domain (WikiArt source label)

The train supplies a firm horizontal beneath bright, angular land and sky. Enough locomotive, pole and building remains for a place to be recognised, even as colour gains greater independence. That stable lower line helps hold the fragments together. The painting offers a useful comparison with Improvisation: Gorge, where such dependable coordinates become much harder to find.

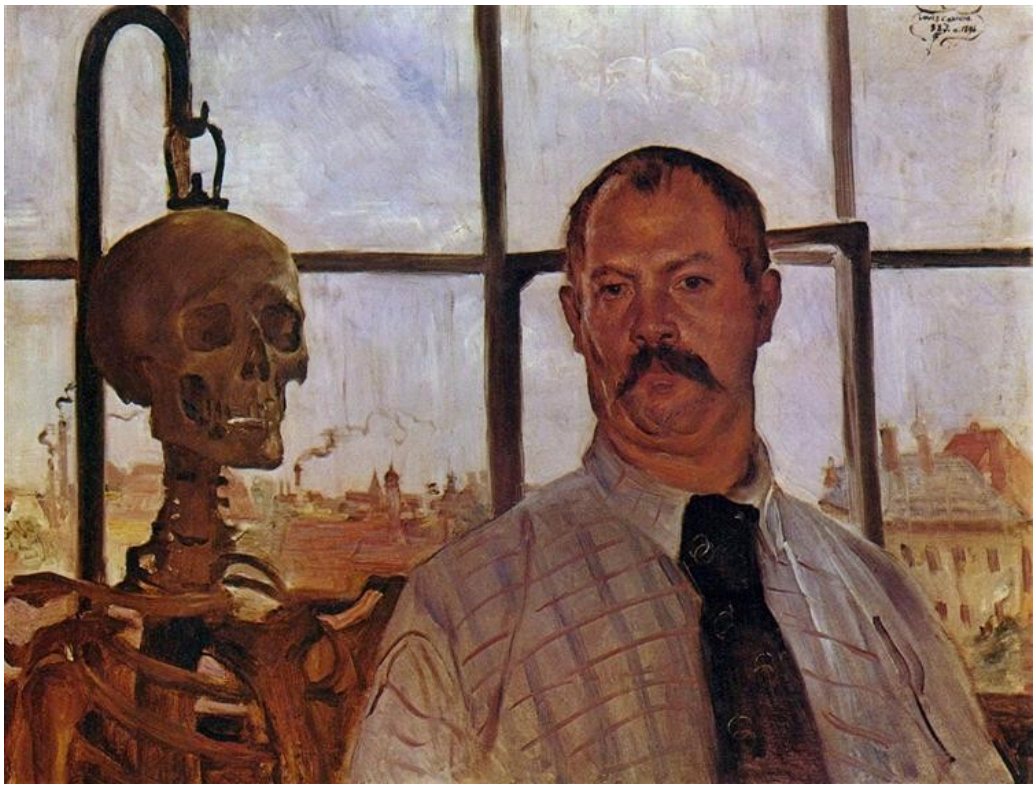

Object source · Open artwork

29 / 30

Self-Portrait with a Skeleton

Lovis Corinth

1896 · Städtische Galerie im Lenbachhaus und Kunstbau München

Lovis Corinth. Self-portrait with Skeleton. Image: WikiArt. Public domain (WikiArt label). Proportionally resized and JPEG compressed; no crop. · Public domain (WikiArt label)

The skeleton and the clothed painter occupy comparable amounts of studio space. As an object of study, the bones belong to the room; as a counterpart to Corinth's living body, they also make mortality available as a reading. The comparison requires little additional symbolism. Two upright figures before the windows are enough to establish it.

Object source · Open artwork

30 / 30

Improvisation: Gorge

Wassily Kandinsky

1914 · Oil on canvas · Städtische Galerie im Lenbachhaus und Kunstbau München

11. VASILY KANDINSKY: Improvisation 'Gorge'. 1914. Munich, Städtische Galerie

Wassily Kandinsky. Improvisation. Gorge. WikiArt source label: Public domain. Proportional resize and JPEG compression; no crop. Source: https://www.wikiart.org/en/wassily-kandinsky/improvisation-gorge-1914 · Public domain (WikiArt source label)

The title suggests terrain, but lines and colours do not settle into a single surveyable place. Diagonals may imply a slope, then continue across boundaries that interrupt a consistent view. Kandinsky allows those elements to act beyond the job of describing objects. The comparison with the railway landscape makes their increased independence concrete rather than merely calling the work abstract.

Object source · Open artwork

Plan by collection, look by comparison

Choose the pair that interests you, then check which institution holds each work and whether it is currently displayed. The Pinakothek collections and Lenbachhaus are not a single venue. Works on paper in particular may rotate; an online collection record is a starting point for planning, not a promise of permanent access.

Further reading

Concerning the Spiritual in Art

Wassily Kandinsky; translated by M. T. H. Sadler · Read free · English

Kandinsky's account of colour, form and the aims of painting, in M. T. H. Sadler's English translation. It gives the artist's own arguments to read beside the works selected here, without settling the meaning of every picture.

Über das Geistige in der Kunst

Wassily Kandinsky · Read free · German

Kandinsky's text in German. Read it alongside the English translation when a term or passage deserves closer attention.

Histoire de Édouard Manet et de son oeuvre

Théodore Duret · Read free · French

Duret's early study of Manet, in French. It offers a historical view of the painter whose portrait of Monet appears in this guide; current museum records should be used for dates and attributions.

Museum website · Official collection guide

Sources and visitor information checked: 2026-10-12

Artline · Pinakotheken & Lenbachhaus (Munich): Masterpieces